Finding Dahshaa Self Government Social

Finding Dahshaa describes self-government negotiations as they have unfolded between Canada and the Dehcho, Déliné, and Inuvialuit and Gwich'in peoples. By contrasting accounts of negotiating sessions in city boardrooms with vibrant descriptions of Dene moosehide-tanning camps on the land and community meetings in small northern communities, it shows why Canada's Aboriginal policy has failed to alleviate the causes of social suffering in the North.
