In many ways, these three miniatures encapsulate the essence and genius of George Gershwin. These pieces were published in 1926 and were to form part of a projected 24 preludes but the work was never completed. The preludes are almost like a sonatina for solo piano consisting of a fast-slow-fast series of movements.

For his fifth volume of Schubert's piano works, Barry Douglas turns to a contrasting pair of sonatas composed in the 1820s. The A minor, from 1823, was composed whilst he suffered an episode of depression following the onset (and harsh treatment for) syphilis. The D major sonata, however, was written in ...
