"Ether, OR" tells the story of a town in Oregon that moves from place to place from multiple perspectives. "Unlocking the Air" is about wars and rumors of wars in a small, nonexistent European country (the same Orsinia from "Orsinian Tales" and "Malafrena"). "Sunday in Summer in Seatown" is a simple prose poem.

That is exactly the case with Unlocking the Air, Ursula K. Le Guin's Pulitzer Prize nominated book of short stories. While not comprised of her normal fantasy and sci-fi , there are still elements of magical realism and fairytale-like fable woven throughout. The 4 and 5 star stories balanced out the 1's and 2's, making this a solid 3 star ...
